

Knight-Hennessy Scholars

The Knight-Hennessy Scholars program cultivates a diverse, multidisciplinary community of emerging leaders from around the world and guides them to collaborate, innovate, and communicate as they prepare to address the complex challenges facing society. Knight-Hennessy Scholars become part of a supportive family of fellow scholars. Through the King Global Leadership Program, scholars will broaden knowledge, develop skills, and strengthen character; this platform provides a collection of community experiences, workshops, meetings with leaders, domestic and global study trips, and personal development opportunities. Knight-Hennessy Scholars also receive funding for graduate study at Stanford University.

The Knight-Hennessy Scholars program at Stanford University has begun our admissions process for the cohort enrolling at Stanford in 2021.

This opportunity would be of interest to anyone thinking of applying to Stanford graduate school who received their undergraduate degree in 2014 or later (Jan 2014 through Sept 2021 for the 2021 cohort). All degrees and majors of graduate school are eligible (including MA, MBA, JD, MD, MS, and PhD). Citizens of all countries are eligible to apply.

As a Knight-Hennessy Scholar, students:

- Join a multi-disciplinary community of Stanford graduate students dedicated to tackling the world's challenges
- Engage in the King Global Leadership Program platform of personal development opportunities, with coaching and feedback, and the opportunity to learn from diverse leaders from different walks of life.
- Receive full funding for up to three years of the graduate program they attend at Stanford, and stipend for room and board.

Who is eligible to apply? Any Academic Discipline in any of Stanford's Graduate Schools
